consulting/design

As an extension of our commitment to design excellence, Children's Museum of Pittsburgh provides design services, exhibit sales and development training. In fiscal year 2024, we worked with clients across the globe to build, license and design these exhibits. One such collaboration, our work with Ehrman Crest Elementary School, was named TIME Magazine's Best Invention of the Year. Other exhibits include the Center for Aviation Technology & Training at Hosanna House's Sherwood Event Center and KIDSPORT at Pittsburgh International Airport.

justice, equity, diversity, accessibility and inclusion (JEDAI)

As part of our efforts towards justice, equity, diversity and inclusion (JEDAI), Children's Museum of Pittsburgh is training our teams to be cognizant of biases, understand systemic oppression, learn about how to work with different populations in a culturally competent manner and provide programming that cultivates belonging across diverse communities. We are building a language to be welcoming of all, and making sure that we are supporting access in a respectful manner.

highlights

community engagement

Committed to serving our local community with intentional, accessible programming rooted in JEDAI principles, we aim to make the Museum an essential community resource on the North Side and beyond. We conduct outreach with more than 50 community-based organizations and festivals through our community engagement activities and welcomes thousands of individuals through our access partnership with Tickets for Kids.

education

The Children's Museum applies its strengths in creating exhibits, programs and research to forge meaningful partnerships to transform education. Each year, our Education team designs and facilitates programs that expand engagement in our exhibits, bring museum experiences into the community, teach educators and more. Additionally, we offer a number of resources for parents, caregivers and educators that seek to understand how and what children, youth and families learn at the Museum.

professional development

Implementing approaches that reflect the latest research on effective adult learning, the Museum's professional development offerings help educators discover ideas and inspiration that fit their teaching style and contexts. Our professional development team works with national experts to host conferences at the Museum and coordinate learning modules to support curriculum on topics that connect hands-on art and making experiences with science, math, literacy, the arts, computational thinking, equity and social justice.

learning & research

The Museum's Learning and Research Department—the largest research and evaluation group housed within a children's museum—has a proud history of conducting and collaborating on research and evaluation services to inform learning experiences with tangible data to support and advance informal learning across museums, institutions, schools and beyond.
